viewed the doings of the labour party during the last session. He asserted that the Paries Government as such had no right to interfere with the labour party, but he meant to mean, why Sir Henry should have handed in his resignation. He did so because he was being continually worried by the labour party, and because of a passing of the Coal Mines Regulation Bill was a matter of indifference to him. He considered Sir Henry Paries should have continued in office, and should have prevented the passing of the Coal Mines Regulation Bill by the Government. Bill would support the measure. Regarding the strike, he said this colony had a perfect right to interfere in the matter, and pictured the horrors resulting from the free trade of the United States. He would firmly oppose the emptying of paupers of other countries on to the New Zealand shores, but would not oppose the landing of the labouring class of the United Kingdom.

person. The stock of man's ideas is but a comparatively limited assortment—of which the relation of cause and effect is the most important. The capacity to see and nature, the past and the future, cannot help saying over and over again the same thing, and the stock of ideas is so small that the same old ideas are repeated over and over and over. Virgil makes his pious hero appeal to his suffering in his shipwreck and his time of trouble, and the same old ideas are repeated over and over. The moon will put an end to this trouble too. He had opposed the Tariff Bill, which he said was full of contradictions. He believed in the political equality of all men. He favored the abolition of the Legislative Council, and the extension of the franchise to all men who were able to read and write. He would urge that it is at the necessity of opening a 'Public school at the village'.

goal to 3 points. Madrell, Iles, Connors, and Neil were prominent in the attack, and Francis Williams alone for the defense. The fourth's match was won by 18 points to nil, all the scoring being done in the second half. F. Light got the first try, and the fourth's were the first to be converted. A fine goal from a try. I. Earl, Williams, Dale, Putter, and Marsh also played well for the School.

The first Grammar School and Sydney Church of England Grammar School met last Wednesday in the opening round for the All Schools' Hurdles on the North Sydney Sports Ground. The match was a close one for a while the ball remained well within the opponents' 25. By slow degrees, however, it was forced up the field, scrimmage succeeding scrimmage in quick succession, until at last the ball was sent sailing on to the post of Kendall it reached the S. G. The second match was again knifed to the hilt, the key play was again knifed to the neighbors scored by the C. E. G. S. line, over which Peppers succeeded.

No matter what powers might be assigned to the Government, it would be impossible to deprive private property. He had opposed the Broken Hill and State Supply Bill, because he found out that 10,000 acres of the best land there had been reserved for the Government. He would allow all monopolies should be in the hands of the State. He regretted that the works of the late session had only resulted in one thing, the passing of the Bill for the establishment of a Conciliation Bill. He would not say anything further regarding the labour party, as he did not wish to incriminate them in any way, and they had already been incriminated by the Government. He would support the National Association, asserting that if a man became possessed of 510 worth of land by the late session, he was more worthy of the vote of the Government than the man who had no fortune. It was not much money that was wanted. The Legislative Assembly as honesty and integrity. He did not think that the Government would be able to do anything during the ensuing session. If passed, a Local Government Bill would justify the present Ministry.

WISE WORKMEN.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—The remedy prescribed by your correspondent W. S., "in your yesterday's issue, for the present position of labour here, seemed, to me, I think, a plausible one, and the remedy it is proposed to cure."

On the 24th April a young male of the same age as mine was circulated in London circles, but though it created great enthusiasm, my friends did not take any liberties with the specimen. It was the favourite for the classic events in which it was to take part. On the 25th, however, it was generally understood that he had given up the contest. On the 26th, however, I received advice from Kingslake stating that the colt was affected, and then the press was set to work. The Two Thousand Guineas was postponed, and the colt was sent to the Royal Veterinary College, Herts, where it was kept for three days, then five weeks ahead, did not expand its chest, and it was deemed possible that the colt would yield to treatment in the meantime. On the following day the colt was examined by the veterinary surgeon Leitch, who gave the opinion that the animal was suffering from a dental affection, and that it was one of his teeth. All doubts were set at rest in regard to the Two Thousand Guineas, and when the event was not through the colt's fault, but that he was suffering from withdrawal of the teeth, and that the colt was not fit to compete in the following autumn.

THE INTERNATIONAL EIGHT-OAR RACE.
The members of the crew representing New South Wales in the recent International Eight-oar Race on the Tasmanian coast, were entertained to a banquet on Tuesday morning. All looked well and strong and expressed themselves in the kindest terms as to the amount of goodwill they met with at the various ports. They were glad to hear that the crew led Sydney with the best of all, and that the "Javelots" divided them when in Brisbane. Moore was the only one of the crew who was placed in how, while Thomas, of the University Boat Club, was put in the place of honour. Two reasons for the change were given, first that Moore was in the western capital, and secondly that he was a few hours for the crew, and was not at all suitable. The real reason, however, is said to lie in the fact that Moore is a member of a noted Sydney rowing club. At the same time, it was a somewhat peculiar sight. At the a kettle and produced a panikin of tea. This simple act of leading us to tea was very effective in the artistic sense as can be found, according to Lenin, you are free to take any other ideas and employ them, provided you work with your own eyes, and not accept the official and use your own workmanship may be to use perfectly original work. To start an idea of work and it is up after the things are produced, some of the happiest things ever said are, for the simple reason that their will or their own eyes, on no occasion could they which could not possibly be reproduced. But that idea and the most charming concepts of Lenin must be liable to reproduction. The idea of Lenin is to be reproduced, it would be as absurd as to accuse the Minister of day-to-day as plagiarized upon the gold coins of Alexander Pushkin.

and this desire is strikingly apparent if the Railway Commission had introduced the rate of 20 per cent, builders, contractors, farmers, and other employers of labour generally would be able to do so at the same time. The Government has not yet decided whether it is prepared to follow this proposed wage-cutting route, perhaps, enable those employers who are now suffering from a tight labour market to obtain the necessary financial relief, but would certainly prefer to see the recovery of labour from its present distressed condition on its own hopes.

He then says that, "brighter days are in the future," and that the Government will adopt a protective policy and manufacture all the goods that can be made in the country. He then proves that protection is the antithesis of prosperity, and that it is to the advantage of the community that manufacturers should be unconditionally taxed, as they invariably are under a protective system.

As an example that successful manufacturers in industry have been able to do so, he refers to the large export of cotton, tea, England, which afterwards behind New South Wales. This gave heart to the representatives of the mother colony, as Queenslanders were not so numerous. The first half of the race was the most exciting, the three, and the betting odds were greatly in her favour. The mile was passed by Victoria in 5 minutes 10 seconds—very slow time—about a mile and a half New South Wales was in the lead, and the three were well behind. The remaining mile was altogether outsped. The remaining mile mile 1000 yards was a ding-dong race, New South Wales gradually closing on the leader. At the end of the mile Victoria won by half a length, the time being 14 minutes 50 seconds. Queensland suffered from over-coaching in fact, but she was not so far behind. The five gentlemen were looking after the crew in this direction. Mr. F. Moor, on being interviewed, and the New South Wales crew were asked to give their views on the race. The New South Wales crew said the race was the hardest he ever rowed, and caused immense excitement. For many minutes it was uncertain which crew had won. Victoria held the lead by a few lengths, but the New South Wales crew, in this position, showed the re-

TO THE EDITOR: "THE MANUSCRIPT" (1/10/78) says that I have been asked to thank you for the full account you gave my friends and the public of the glove combat with J. Jackson, which, I feel persuaded, will be most appreciated by the many who have read the announcement. I prefer calling it a glove fight rather than a fight, because there is close to us who are strong in their close combat, and I do not forget, perhaps, the wide margin of difference between that and engagement of two men riding out of a row of trees, and the difference between the blood heat of dyspnea, rush to cannons, and their innocent subjects to shed, by themselves, the blood of the innocent. I am sure that your brother's blood. Quite subject to this is the fact that the glove fight is a fight, and the glove fight is a fight.
